The Imperial College London Academic Programme of Studies in Allergy

Postgraduate Certificate in Allergy

The Imperial College PGCert in Allergy offers a sound theoretical background to the principles of the mechanisms and management of allergic disease, and a robust practical programme in diagnosis and treatment. Commencing in October each year, this is a nine-month Masters level part-time blended learning course. Students attend St. Mary’s Hospital Medical School for three one-week face to face modules, and complete a programme utilizing extensive on-line e-learning resources and exercises, enabling them to incorporate their studies around professional and personal commitments.

MSc in Allergy

The MSc is a 2 or 3 year part-time programme following the successful completion of the PGCert. Students select and complete assignments on four specialist clinical topic Modules, and conduct an allergy research project for which they submit a 10,000 word dissertation and attend for viva voce examination.

Short Courses in Allergy

The MSc specialist modules can be studied as short courses with CME and APL accreditation. Course topics and dates for the 2013-14 academic year are:

- Allergic Gastrointestinal Disease Module: 12-13 November 2013
  - Food Hypersensitivity Module: 14-15 November 2013
  - Allergic Airways Disease Module: 17-18 March 2014
  - Allergic Rhinitis and Hayfever Module: 19-20 March 2014
  - Allergic Skin Disease Module: 9-10 June 2014
  - Paediatric Allergy Module: 11-12 June 2014

For further information please visit the Imperial College London Website or contact the Course Director Dr Jill A Warner: jill.warner@imperial.ac.uk