PRESENTATION LETTER

Dear colleagues and friends,

With the progress of the immunological interpretation, genetic, phenotypization of diseases in every field of medicine, our discipline more than others is taking advantage of new knowledge.

In recent years, allergists have learned to diagnose through molecular diagnostics, to evaluate some otherwise neglected aspects of our illnesses, and to imagine new exciting ways of treatment.

On the strength of this knowledge, our interpretation of the pathways leading to sensitization and allergic disease has greatly expanded. The international scientific community invests resources and time in updating on all these innovations, in an attempt to put them as far as possible within the reach of the patient. In this spirit, the Rome congress wants to offer an ideal arena to follow-up with the discussions of allergists in previous meetings. In San Francisco, the AAAAI widely discussed many aspects of food allergy in 2019. Since then, WAO has had other meetings dedicated to the issues of chronic asthma, atopic dermatitis, drug allergy, and the possible use of new diagnostic-therapeutic strategies in these important areas.

In April 2020, the time will be ripe for a point of the situation in pediatric allergy research. In Rome, we will develop the themes of prevention, epidemiology, and interpretation of early events in the development of allergy. We will present the state of the art in pediatric asthma and atopic dermatitis. The congress will present the evolving production of a series of guidelines on different aspects of cow's milk allergy in DRACMA.

These and other issues will be our way of contributing to the cultural growth of the allergy community and preparing for the great WAO congress to be held in Kyoto, 17-20 September 2020.

Following an experience inaugurated in Lyon, an important part of the congress will be dedicated to direct listening to new research that will come in the form of abstracts. The young authors of research in the field of allergy will be selected to become full speakers of the congress alongside the masters of the discipline. This will be our way of enhancing the Junior Members section of the World Allergy Organization and providing a stage for exchanging views on the most current topics.

The Rome congress is for you. We will launch your practice and your research towards an increasingly promising future of exciting knowledge, in-depth diagnostic methods, and effective precision therapeutic methods for the allergy patient community worldwide.

Take a few extra days to enjoy the beauties of Rome after hearing exciting research and discussions.

We wait for you with open arms.
Alessandro Fiocchi
And the Scientific Committee of the Rome WISC.
